Dowe's invention is a most valuable one, and that he was justified in refusing the princely offer made to him by firms of army contractors and others who are desirous of purchasing his rights. The Russian embassador, Count von Schouvaloff, at the Russian embassy, fired two shots at the tailor while the latter was incased in his bullet proof

The Invention of a German Tailor Has An-

Berlin, but throughout Europe, are discussing the recent experiments made coat, and as Dowe sustained absolutely no injury the Russian embassador pronounced himself satisfied with the experiment. The experiments before Count von Schouvaloff began with a thorough test of the new rifle in use in the German army. From a box of cartridges one was selected at random, and the rifle was fired at a block of solid oak, which was pierced by the small steel-like bullet. After the shot at the block of oak Dowe dressed himself in his bullet proof coat and offered himself as a target.

While the rifle was being aimed at the tailor the spectators were strung to an extreme state of nervousness and instinctively closed their eyes in anticipation of seeing Dowe killed upon the spot, but after the report of the rifle rang out and the tailor was standing apparently unhurt there was a feeling of immense relief among all present. Dowe evidently noticed the state of excitement produced by the experiment, for he smiled, much to the relief of the onlookers, and said, "I feel nothing." A second shot was then fired directly at the tailor's heart, but it had the same effect as the first. The tailor was absolutely unburt, and both bullets were found embedded in the bullet proof cost, which covered his breast and body in a manner in which it is proposed to adopt for soldiers, leaving the arms and legs as well as the head without protection. Then commenced a series of experiments which were even more interesting than the first. A horse was covered with a bullet proof coat, for it is proposed that the cavalry of the future is to be protected by the wonderful material invented by the tailor of Mannheim. In this case a number of shots were fired in quick succession at the animal while it was quietly eating oats from a manger. The horse, a well trained cavalry mount, started slightly at the first shot, apparently, however, only disturbed by the unexpected report of the rifle. Then other shots were fired as quickly as possible, some of them striking almost in the same place as previous bullets, but the horse continued eating as if nothing extraordinary was happening.

A naval officer present at ments asked Herr Dowe if his bullet proof material could stand a pounding from all the warships in the world without sustaining any considerable damage. Of course this is only Herr Dowe's theory, but as he seems to have carried out his theory in regard to the bullet proof coat for soldiers it does not seem unlikely that he may be able to carry out his theory in regard to protecting

The new garment is described as looking like ordinary army clothing material. the resisting secret substance being placed beneath the outside cloth. The garment is in the nature of a breastplate and is fastened to the side buttons of the soldier's uniform. It is only to be used in actual warfare and weighs about six pounds. Representatives of several foreign governments have been making strong efforts to obtain Herr Dowe's secret, but it is said that these efforts have failed, and patriotic Germans express the desire that the German government should secure Herr Dowe's secret, so that the bullet proof coats may be used by the German army alone. It is said that 3,000,000 marks have been offered to Herr Dowe by the German government for his invention, or, as an alternative, a 100 year guarantee of the monopoly of supplying the German government with the necessary number of cuirasses at the rate of 18 marks apiece .-

Washington Star.

New York's Four Hundred. Ward McAllister says: "There is probably no society in the world so moral and pure as the greater portion of New York fashionable society today. Turn back to history and read of the reign of Henry IV, Louis XIV and Louis XV and see how the brilliant women of that day behaved themselves. Examine their records, and you will declare that in comparison with them our society women are spotlessly innocent of all wrong. We are not by any means as bad as we are painted."

Against Landscape Advertising. Lord Rosebery's attack upon landscape advertising in his Academy speech the other day has given an impetus to agitation on the subject. One of the greatest countryside advertisers announces that he will cease this manner of intruding pills on the attention of the public. The tacit boycotting of all concerns which disfigure landscapes is becoming a strong and popular policy. It is without open organization, because such a movement would be of doubtful legality.-London

American Tactics In the German Army. The imperial maneuvers to be held between the First and Seventeenth army corps this year will be more than usually interesting. The cavalry reconnoitering is to be carried out on a scale hitherto unknown and over long distances, like the American cavalry practice in the civil war. Men and horses are being trained and hardened by long distance rides in squadrons.—London Standard.

MAKING UP HORSES.

an Expert's Directions For Preparing

Them For Sale or Show. In fattening horses for sale flaxseed jelly or even oilmeal steamed will be found to give very great satisfaction. If fed in moderation, it assists digestion and puts a glossy skin on the animals. It is essentially a fat forming food, and, strange to say, also helps to build up good working muscle if fed in small quantities. Many a hardworked truck horse would do much better if given a handful of oilmeal in his night's feed. It goes without saying that when getting horses into flesh for the market the quicker the requisite amount can be put on the better it will be for the seller.

A friend of the writer recently bought from one farm 32 great, big, powerful geldings that had done a rough winter's work on indifferent care and looked badly in consequence. They were fed as noted above and in six weeks went off at a very handsome profit, as nice looking a bunch as ever were in a stable together. The reports of every market for horses contain this expression, "These prices for horses of such and such an age, sound and 'in good flesh.' " It is impossible to get a good price for thin horses, and there is no sense in getting rid of them at what they will fetch and letting some one make all the profit by simply putting 100 pounds of meat on their frames. One man can do it as well as another.

There is another point to be noted in thus getting horses ready for the market. The feeder must carefully note every animal's feeding capacity. Scarcely any two horses in the same stable will do equally well on exactly the same ration. The feeds must be arranged in proportion to capacity. In most of the middle western states as well as in the east there are men who make a business of buying up thin horses and putting flesh on them, and these operators generally get rich. The rule about good flesh on the open horse market holds good with road and carriage horses as well as with the heavier kinds, and it is more easily complied with, for it takes much less feed to get a trim driver into shape than a big, heavy drafter.

A word or two of advice as to making horses up for show may not be out of place, in view of the fact that many local exhibitions take place at the beginning of the season. The stallion that is "all run down," though he may be the best horse of the lot, will attract the least attention. To get light harness horses into condition for show at this time, sloppy feed must be avoided, and crushed oats, barley and bran take the place of softer foods.

Plenty of exercise must be given and good grooming done every day. If soft flesh would do for a stallion to make his season on, it could be as easily and quickly put on, as in the other cases mentioned, but a better and more serviceable article is demanded and can only be supplied with grain and work. A mash, however, may be given with advantage at night. It should be warm, very nearly dry, and twice a week a good sized rutabaga or a few boiled carrots should be added. - Horseman.

American Breeds of Sheep.

We have two breeds of sheep which have been developed in America—the America Merino and the common sheep. The one-the result of the greatest care and most judicious line of feeding; pastured on the very rich herbage of the Vermont hills, supplemented by an abundance of nitrogenous food; carefully housed from every raindrop and as constantly protected from the sun and rain by an impervious blankethas developed into a sheep nowhere equaled as a wool producer. The other, by constant neglect, has resulted in a race with smaller bodies and longer legs, active and reliant, capable of picking a living in scanty pastures and among rocks and bushes and living for weeks with no water but such as could be got from the dew laden herbage. They are light shearers, but have a constitution and hardiness nowhere else found. If we take the special bred and special fed sheep of England and subject them to the same neglect and want of care that our common sheep get, we shall raise only scrubs .- J. S. Wood-

Live Stock Points. The finest specimens of the Russian Orloffs that have yet been seen in America are the saddle horses.

"Mutton is what we make it," says a recent writer. Just so. The character of the meat of growing or fattening animals depends very largely on the kind of food given to them. Farmers and live stock men at present need to study above all the different foods given to animals, noting the effect of each. The experiment stations are doing this to some extent at present, but not sufficiently. A knowledge of scientific feeding is what we want. Clover is the best forage plant for

Where a farmer cannot have the best blood that is going in all his farm animals, food and care will do much to make up for the want of it. The cow pea and the common field pea are not the same thing. The cow pea requires a warm climate and will not thrive north of Maryland latitude. The field pea will grow in the northern states and in Canada, but does not do its best north of the corn belt. When an animal lies down in a pasture field, the grass beneath it becomes tainted with the insensible perspiration and will not be eaten till the odor is washed off by a soaking rain.

Young new grass produces a very watery milk. There is a shortage of hearly 40 per cent in the lamb crop of 1894. Do not sell your sheep when everybody else is doing the same. Remember the old rule given by the man who got rich. Sell when everybody else is buy-ing; buy when everybody else is selling.
